ECHELONED TRANSPARENCY

Campus Novartis, Basel, Switzerland

Architects:
Zwimpfer Partner AG, Basel
Maki and Associates, Tokyo

Initial situation:

In different phases, the St. Johann factory grounds in Basel are to be transformed into the Novartis Campus, a campus of knowledge and innovation and a lieu of encounter. This is where the new office building was constructed.

Solution:

Two different special versions with three-phase transparency (increasingly transparent towards the top) were created for the meeting rooms and what are referred to as the private rooms. Fabric manufacturer and architects had to work closely together to ensure that the transparency gradient of the fabrics corresponded with the architectural dimensions. The fabrics were to be visually pleasing as well as functional, i.e. to ensure privacy and sound absorption. The complex design is based on a special jacquard and weaving technique.
